The International Dialogue on Peacebuilding and Statebuilding is a unique forum of over forty countries and organisations that work together to change the way conflict and fragility are understood and addressed. With strong leadership from the g7+ group of countries affected by conflict and fragility, proactive support by development partners, and significant engagement by civil society, the International Dialogue has identified and proposed concrete measures to prioritise, fund and fulfil key peacebuilding and statebuilding goals.

These are clearly articulated in the New Deal for Engagement in Fragile States, which was launched globally in November 2011. The New Deal facilitates country-led and country-owned transitions out of fragility.

The 5 Peacebuilding and Statebuilding Goals (PSGs):

• Legitimate Politics; foster inclusive politics
• Security; establish and strengthen security for all
• Justice; address and increase people’s access to justice
• Economic Foundations; develop jobs and opportunities
• Revenues & Services; manage resources and create capacity for fair service delivery

These goals should guide the identification of peacebuilding and statebuilding priorities and donor engagement at the country level.

Conflict and fragility affect an increasing number of countries and regions in the world. Ensuring more effective partnership to address their causes and consequences is still a priority for the international community—particularly in achieving the Sustainable Development Goals.

The New Deal remains a unique framework and the International Dialogue a unique forum to guide progress in conflict affected and fragile situations.
